

Dec. 7, 2007

Discover the Year's Best Household Items

Products That Solve Common Household Problems at Affordable Prices

Every year, the scientists, engineers, home economists and other experts at the Good Housekeeping Research Institute review thousands of new household products to find the few that truly deserve to get Good Housekeeping's annual "Good Buy Awards." These awards go to products that are innovative, solve common household problems, are affordable and perform well.

Today, Good Housekeeping Research Institute director Miriam Arond announced the year's eight winners of the magazine's 13th annual Good Buy Awards exclusively on "Good Morning America."

8. CARES Child Aviation Restraint System from Kids Fly Safe ($75)

If you have a toddler, you want to be sure she's buckled in when you fly. But lugging her car seat onto a plane can be tough, and you can't even be sure it will fit in the airplane seat. The CARES Child Aviation Restraint System weighs less than a pound and lets you strap in a child age 1 to 4, weighing 22 to 44 pounds. It loops over the top of the child's plane seat and connects to the safety belt. One Good Housekeeping tester raved about it, saying it kept her 1-year-old in his seat during the flight.

For more information go to www.goodhousekeeping.com.

