YOU BOUGHT IT

Highlights and feedback from ZRecs reader purchases

Welcome to another edition of You Bought It, where we take a peek at interesting stuff ZRecs readers are buying through our Amazon links. As mentioned previously, we (and every Amazon affiliate) get lists of products sold through our links on Amazon.com - in our case, these purchases fund much of the consumer research and consumer advocacy we do.

This edition covers reader purchases from August 13 through September 26, 2009.

This past month or so also saw sales of several CARES flight restraint systems. We have highly recommended the FAA-approved CARES system for air travel with young children, and have noticed that in the time since we first started using it, we have basically stopped getting questions from flight attendants checking to make sure they're legit for takeoff and landing. My guess is that they're seeing more and more of them. ZRecs' readers purchases of CARES restraints during holiday travel periods - and the fact that CARES' manufacturer, Kids Fly Safe, appears to be doing well even during rough economic times - certainly support that theory.
